Dear Mr. Drew, you are listed as the contact for the SEC though you are not listed as a member.

I experienced deep dismay when I read of the SEC's permitting of Granite Reliable's road expansion. When contracts are broken, the culture unravels. In placing business desires above law, the SEC is promoting anarchy

In permitting Granite Reliable to break its contract, the SEC broke its contract with the people of New Hampshire, thereby destroying whatever small bit of hope I had that it would act with integrity in the future.

Now, every project developer knows they can hide details of a project that will be troublesome or even stop the project, then come back later.
