

Sun 8/24/2014

Ivan Quinchia <iquinchia@yahoo.com>

Good morning David,

Although the rule making initiative is a downstream process to a sound national, regional and state energy policy which we all know needs a lot of work beginning with depoliticizing the policies and also engaging the real stake holders which are the consumers and not the utilities, I would like to give some impute on the siting process.

The engagement and support of local cities and towns, the citizens of these towns as well as the many small business that employ and make a living in these locales is paramount to a solid siting policy, as well as the many organizations that are stuarths of our beautiful state.

In doing so, diligence has to be placed in sorting out of the stake holder impute, the many shell organizations that are created by corporations, unions and special interest groups that try to influence decisions as well as the outcome.

In addition, any expert witness used in the process must have solid, legitimate and certifiable accreditation and the data used in this process must be verifiable trough multiple reliable sources.

At stake is not only the energy future of New Hampshire but the quality of life for the citizens of the state and this is the real responsibility of the Site Evaluation Committee as it will become a stuart for our future way of life.

Thank you for taking our comments into account.

Ivan & Barbara Quinchia
Hebron, NH

Sent from my iPad