Mr Wiesner,

I have been dealing with wind turbine placement for the last two years {Wild Meadows project} when we first found out about this project it was well into the planning stage. When we got the details of placement of towers the town of Alexandria was up in arms along with Grafton, Danbury plus other towns. The rest is history the fact that a company can and will tell you that a 492 ft tower [in my case 7] one half mile from your house is no big deal just makes your jaw drop. This type of project with the towns so close will not work or get public support just look at the votes. The problems with wind projects are well known but some people in power only give lip service to the public. I have been to Concord and have watched the wind lobby at work they are everywhere it seems like they never go home. The S.E.C. is changing for the better but public input must be looked at as a top concern.
