Dear Pam,

On Friday, January 3, 2020, Eversource's overhead construction contractor on the Seacoast Reliability Project, JCR, had access crews that worked in the ROW at Structures 46-48 (NH Fish and Game property near the railroad). Late that afternoon, a routine field check by Eversource's environmental compliance monitor found that matting had been installed without the proper best management practices (BMP's) for storm water runoff/control installed, despite previous instruction for them to be installed. Eversource called JCR back to the site where temporary BMP's were installed, which ran into the night, and exceeded the allowable work hours provided for in the SEC Certificate.

It should be noted that the area was expecting both rain and snow over the weekend, which is why Eversource required JCR to install BMP's immediately. The JCR crew arrived back onsite at 6:30pm, and were offsite by 9:30pm.

JCR access crews have been placed on stand-down. Eversource will be conducting a further investigation and will re-train all personnel involved. The Town of Durham was also notified of JCR's activities on today's date.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Thank you,
Adam
