No Northern Pass. It wouldn't be worth it if it gave free electric to every single North Country resident. Build smaller plants in NH, solar, wind, etc... not massive power lines that stretch from a foreign nation straight thru some of the most fragile eco-systems on our continent. Power is more secure when not concentrated in the control of a giant, foreign national monolithic corporation.

The benefits to the actual people and taxpayers of the state will not outweigh the permanent insult to our way of life, our wild places, and the few benefits the north country enjoys (wild places, wild life, beauty) in exchange for our under representation.

Electricity is a strategic resource and should not be delegated to another nation whose interests do not always accord with our own.

No. NH will barely see any benefits, there are no guarantees of cost reductions or that the power will be designated for NH.

Let them run it through the states who benefit most.

If it must go through, it had better be buried, but even that will leave deep irreparable scars on our beautiful landscape.
