Dear Concerned,

Although I suspect the entire Northern Pass project has been a done deal from the moment it was proposed, I'd still like to voice my opposition as a non-moneyed, and thus, insignificant New Hampshire citizen. Do I sound frustrated and jaded? I am. Money talks. In this case, the Eversource shareholders and the deep pockets of this project's proponents have gotten the attention of the SEC, DOE and governor. They have run rough-shod over the desires of average citizens who will be impacted by this project. They alone stand to benefit. I believe this project will have devastating impacts on the tourism economy and ruin the landscape that so many hold dear. The dollars "saved" by ratepayers are laughable. I'm not sure what to do with the estimated $18 I'll save each year! No thank you! I'd rather be able to canoe down the Pemigewasset without the buzz of ugly overhead lines, and drive north and south through the state without being subjected to the eyesore Eversource so desperately wants to build. If Eversource was willing to bury the entire line along the Route 93 corridor, I believe much of the opposition would disappear. However, since this will impact their profits, they will resist to the end. Money talks.
