As a resident of New Hampshire for over 26 years, first attracted by the picturesque landscapes, I find it appalling that our leaders would even consider allowing NH to be used as a long, ugly extension cord for Southern New England. This proposed gigantic, erector set marring the natural beauty of this majestic state sickens me to no end. Why should we allow a monstrous line of towers to destroy our home views and home values, so some may save a few dollars a year, while the big company makes fools of us residents.

I am all for progress, but I have neither seen nor heard a compelling reason to accept this flawed plan probably for the simple reason that it is NO GOOD!

If it is passed, at the very least bury the entire length-every single inch, no matter how much Eversource complains about the cost. After all, they will only pass the price tag along to their customers anyway, and their stock holders surely wouldn't mind a lower return, since the promotions seem to be for lower energy costs good for all....HA! I've been around long enough to know that promises of lower costs and more efficiency seem to fade away when reality sets in. Unexpected costs always rear their ugly heads, but usually the circumstances are foreseen, even though they are sometimes kept under wraps by those seeking the approval for their schemes.

Thank you for the opportunity to let my voice be heard AGAINST NORTHERN PASS!
