Dear Pamela Monroe,

I moved to NH 40 years ago to escape power lines and traffic jams and crowds and street lights. Some of these ugly distractions have increased. We need electricity, but should not be subjected to giant transmission towers to bring power to Mass residents at NH expense and destruction of our landscape which is responsible for much of our tourism revenue. We should not be able to be forced to accept this. Mass does not want wind energy turbines off their coast to make electricity and we should not have to put up with electric power lines disrupting our tranquil countryside.

Dick Comstock

Sincerely,
Richard Comstock
