Dear Pamela Monroe,

Eversource and Hydro Quebec care nothing about how they will change the environment of the North Country. Their only concern is for the profit to be gained. Building structures that will last for the lifetimes of all residents of New Hampshire and refusing reasonable requests to bury the entire run of the transmission lines means simply that profits are being valued more than the lives of people who live, work and play in the areas which will be forever changed. There are clean energy alternatives which are more environmentally friendly and much less unsightly than elevated transmission lines.

Sincerely,
Walt Rankin
