The recent U.S. Department of Energy approval is shameful. Their own analysis indicates NH will suffer adverse impacts to tourism, recreation, land, and wildlife.

Allowing this project to continue will be a disaster for our state. It's not needed now, and will be even less valuable in the future. The sustainable energy revolution is nearly at its tipping point, and within a decade or two, energy will be so cheap and plentiful, that taking it across state lines and international borders will seem ridiculous, and outdated.

We need to think long-term about a project that has long-term consequences.
