Dear Pamela Monroe,

I am a strong proponent of clean energy and combating climate change as quickly as possible, and while closing power plants that rely on fossil fuels sounds appealing, losing jobs to Canada does not. Shouldn't we be replacing dirty energy jobs with clean energy jobs, retraining folks and keeping New Hampshire's workforce on the cutting edge? Meanwhile we're putting massive man-made structures through some of the most pristine and untouched parts of our state, and our nation. This is not the right way to go about bringing sustainable energy to New England. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Emily Aber
