

SEC COMMENTS COLLECTION

SECDocket	2015-06 Northern Pass Transmission - Eversource
CommenterName	Jack Saunders
CommenterCity	Holderness
DateReceived	12-12-2017

CommenterWords

Before acquiescing to the desecration of NH's unique natural beauty by unnatural unsightly cable-carrying tall towers, NH must demand a complete financial audit of NP construction and operating entities. The obvious reasons for these 2 audits are: (1) to hopefully show that NP can afford to bury more cables than currently planned, and (2) that once they are operating delivering power to NP customers, NP must prove they earn sufficient income to reimburse their investors (and stockholders) after paying all salaries and operating expenses. This will ensure NP will not go broke leaving NH with an unsightly structural skeleton. In the event of a natural disaster like earthquake (I recall NH is subject to geological disturbances -- witness the frequent detection of radon gas) -- NP should earmark funds to repair towers and to remove them if NP goes bankrupt.