The point where the towers go below ground in Bethlehem is immediately at roadside. If they move the transition north by 1/2 mile, the towers won't be visible from route 302. The current transition is immediately across the road from a lake used for recreation and adjacent to a new extended stay hotel that will suffer from the imposition of these ugly man made towers on an otherwise bucolic scene.

The cost of going below ground an extra 1/2 mile on an existing right of way is trivial compared to the overall cost of this project.
