Northern Pass is bad for New Hampshire. Nothing can possibly give Massachusetts and others the right to use NH as an extension cord, at the expense of a key part of New Hampshire's economy (tourism) and its uniqueness (the wilderness that New Hampshire has preserved).

Any supposed economic benefits are temporary, extremely short-sighted, and benefit only a few. The statement that power lines will not negatively affect property values is naive and irresponsible. The long-term damage to New Hampshire's economy from the scarring of the wilderness cannot ever be repaired. Tourism is a major part of the New Hampshire economy; it is a national destination in the northeast United States. It must not be thrown away for short-term gains. The thoughtless resource and power management that has brought us to this point must not be entertained or encouraged.
