Building bigger towers is a “buggy-whip” approach to solving an energy “shortage”, if one really does exist. Eversource should stop bullying New Hampshire and build “a better mouse trap”. This IS the 21st century, and Eversource should act like it; local power is better. It is also unfortunate that a company the size of Eversource only pays lip service to being a good steward of the land we here in New Hampshire treasure. There is little evidence that Eversource can responsibly handle smaller projects so what are we to think they will do with one this size. HUGE corporate profits in exchange for a scarred landscape are NOT in New Hampshire's best interest.
