There's only one reason for letting these towers through NH and that's greed. They will hurt the long range economy of any region they're built in. No tourist is going to drive 3-5 hours to see the snow fall on Jumbo towers when they can go elsewhere. AND the towers will be left to rust and rot should the US decide not to continue using Canadian electricity. Other countries have learned to bury these lines for years yet HQ refuses to bury the entire line. Greed. Once they go up they're up. The benefit is 100% elsewhere while the small towns which depend on the pristine NH beauty to draw in tourist will be left with HQ's wires and towers, and not even a significant reduction on their electric bills to off set the loss of revenue. Greed is blind folding common sense. Bury it of stay in Canada!
