APPENDIX G:

Analysis to Reduce the Number of Potential Scenic Resources

ANALYSIS TO REDUCE THE NUMBER OF POTENTIAL SCENIC RESOURCES

April 6, 2017

Introduction

T. J. Boyle provided an analysis of potential scenic resources that identified more than 18,000 scenic resources, as summarized in Table 6 of the NPT VIA Review. This analysis was based on available databases and presents the direct resulting data, with no attempts to further refine the data. As a result, there are many potential resources that may be construed as including "duplications," as defined below. We have reviewed the List of Potential Scenic Resources in Appendix D of the NPT VIA Review for duplications, as described below.

Identifying "Duplications"

There are several forms of "duplication" that occurred in Appendix D as summarized in Table 6 of the NPT VIA Review.

- 1. Appendix D and Table 6 are organized by town. If a scenic resource, such as a state park, occurs in two towns then it was counted twice.
- Each segment of a linear feature with potential visibility was listed as a separate scenic resource. For instance, two stretches of a scenic road several miles apart were each listed as a separate scenic resource.
- 3. A scenic resource may have several separately mapped parcels, and each one with potential visibility was listed separately.
- 4. Within a single category of scenic resource identified in the SEC rules, a location may be listed in two databases that have different kinds of geometry. For instance, public waters with a scenic quality are scenic resources (Site 102.45(c)); a lake in the polygon database overlaps with a river in the line database that runs through it. If there is potential visibility where the lake and river overlap, they were each listed.
- 5. There may be overlap between databases that are used to describe a scenic resource type. For instance, the historic resources identified by Preservation Company are limited to the area within 1 mile of the NPT. Some of these historic resources are listed in the National Register of Historic Places database, which extends to the full area of potential visual impact.
- 6. A scenic resource of one category can include a sub-component of another scenic resource category. For instance, Little Diamond Pond (Site 201.45(c)) is within Coleman State Park (Site 102.45(d)), Deerfield Center Historic District (Site 102.45(e)) is within Deerfield Town Center (Site 10245(f)), and Bear Brook State Park Civilian Conservation Corps Camp Historic District (Site 102.45(e)) is within Bear Brook State Park (Site 102.45(d)).
- 7. A single scenic resource may meet the criteria for more than one category of scenic resource, as defined by Site 102.45. For instance, all scenic roads (Site 102.45(a)) are also public roads (Site 102.45(c and d)).
- T. J. Boyle created a list of scenic resources with potential visibility that attempts to remove duplication that occurs because of the first five reasons. The results are organized by the category of scenic resources identified in Site 102.45, which preserves the last two kinds of apparent duplication. The procedures used to remove duplication are applied within each category of scenic resource identified in Site 102.45(a) through (f). The first step is to select features with terrain visibility. Within a specific category of scenic resources, features with the same name were combined into a single feature. In some instances, portions of a dataset were erased where they were covered by another dataset within the same category. We applied this method to the datasets for Scenic Byways, Designated Rivers, Conservation/Public Lands, Great Ponds, Public Rivers, Public Roads, Access to Public Waters, Recreation Inventory—Points and Polygons, Recreational Trails, Listed Historic Resources—Points and Polygons, Potential Historic Resources, and Community Center Areas.

This analysis does not incorporate Community Identified Resources (CIRs). However, this should not be interpreted as an indication that CIRs are somehow less important than scenic resources identified by other means. T. J. Boyle believes that the CIR process is a valuable complement to the use of existing spatial datasets. The reason that CIRs are not incorporated is that the approach taken to reduce apparent "duplication" of scenic resources is unsuitable for use with the CIR database. The process depends on the use of a standard formal name for the scenic resource, and the CIRs appear to often use a descriptive informal name.

List of Scenic Resources

Table 1 below reports the number of separate scenic resources by type and database. The results of the analysis to identify and reduce duplicate scenic resources within 10 miles of the NPT that have potential visibility based on bare ground conditions are presented in Table 2, at the end of this report. This analysis was designed to remove duplication within a resource type, but not between resource types.

^{*} These results are subject to the limitations described below.

Limitations of these Results

These results provide a preliminary identification of scenic resources by category, as identified in Site 102.45. This is not a comprehensive list for the following reasons.

1. These procedures do not recognize that a scenic resource may have several, easily recognized distinct parts that may be considered as individual scenic resources and would be evaluated separately for potential visual impacts in a typical VIA. For instance, the Presidential Range Tour includes 66 miles of scenic byway and is crossed four times by the NPT; the average distance between crossings is 7.7 miles. The most significant effect of removing "duplication" is that all roads and rivers have been reduced to a single resource, regardless of length and distance between potential exposures to the Project.

The effect of this limitation is to reduce the number of identified scenic resources with potential visibility, since it does not recognize the possibility of easily recognized, distinct scenic resources that share a single name.

2. These procedures result in the elimination of potentially visible scenic resources that are not explicitly named within the data source, since it is not possible to determine whether they are distinct from another scenic resource. For instance, a conservation area may be composed of several adjacent parcels, only one of which is named. Similarly, a trail may be composed of several segments, only one of which is named. If the visible portion of a scenic resource is unnamed, then it will not be identified in the above analysis. No attempt is made to identify unnamed scenic resources.

The effect of this limitation is to reduce the number of identified scenic resources with potential visibility, since the potential visibility may be to only an unnamed portion of a scenic resource. Alternatively, if it is a separate resource, it is not being identified because no name is listed.

3.	ial visibility. In particular, the analysis does not include:
	All historic sites within 10 miles of the NPT (Site 102.45(e)).
	Lands receiving a 20 percent reduction in their current use tax assessment in return for year-round public recreation use (Site 102.45(d)).
	Tourist destinations identified in the New Hampshire Visitor's Guide , which is published by NH Department of Resources and Economic Development, Division of Travel and Tourism Development (Site 102.45(c)).

The effect of this limitation is to reduce the number of identified scenic resources with potential visibility. It is probable that there are many historic resources, properties with the recreation current use assessment, and recognized tourist destinations that have potential visibility of the NPT.

4. While the analysis is designed to remove duplication within a scenic resource category, a scenic resource may be listed in more than one category, as described by the kinds of duplication in numbers 6 and 7 above.

The effect of this limitation is to increase the apparent total number of scenic resources with potential visibility; it does not affect the number of resources identified within a scenic resource category.

5. The analysis assumes that the scenic resources all have different names and that they are named accurately in the databases. As a result, two different scenic resources with potential visibility and with the same name will be listed only once. Conversely, parts of a single resource with potential visibility that have different names will each be listed.

The effect of this limitation is unknown, since it could increase or decrease the number of scenic resources identified. However, this limitation does not appear to be common.

Conclusions

T. J. Boyle originally prepared the analysis of potential scenic resources to demonstrate that the 282 scenic resources identified in the NPT VIA greatly understated the number of scenic resources with potential visibility of the Project, as required by the SEC Rules. This analysis provides further refinement of potential scenic resources, but still strongly supports the finding that the NPT VIA fails to adequately identify scenic resources per Site 301.05(b)(5).

	Site 301.05(b)(87) requires that the photosimulations be "within the area of potential construction of the proposed facility and associated infrastructure."

	line would have on the surrounding landscape. In locations such as these, co-location of the proposed Project with other existing lines does not minimize impacts. (NPT VIA, p.
